THE MARITIME FREQUENCY DIRECTORY

The listings in this directory have been prepared from current license data. System and usage notes are based on authors' experience and observations and may vary in different locales. However, errors and omissions may occur and the author and publisher disclaim any responsibility or liability for same.

This publication is prepared for use by radio monitors and not for use in navigation or maritime communications.

Section 605 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, may apply to all Stations listed and operating on the frequencies listed in this directory. The use of or disclosure to any person of the contents of the communications monitored maybe prohibited. It is suggested that the reader obtain a copy of this law in order to become fully aware of meaning and content.

The Electronic Communications Privacy Act, called Public Law 99-508, was effective on January 19, 1987. At this writing it is difficult to determine how the act will be interpreted and applied, but the interception of some radio communications is a federal offense.

The reader is cautioned that both Section 605 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, and the Electronic Communications Privacy Act, Public Law 99-508, apply to some frequencies listed in this directory.

This Publication, prepared from the latest license information, is not intended for use as a navigational directory. Frequencies change and the appropriate navigational publications should be used.

USING THE MARITIME FREQUENCY DIRECTORY

The MARITIME Frequency Directory has been prepared from license data and research of stations licensed in the United States.

PART I - GENERAL INFORMATION

Includes general information, highlights of specific systems, and general frequency assignments.

Part II - ITU FREQUENCY CHARTS

Presents the new ITU frequency assignments and indicates the channel number, coast frequency, and ship frequency for both Single Side Band and Narrow Band Direct Printing and Data Transmission Stations.

Part III - NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE STATIONS

Lists the National Weather Service Stations in alphabetical order by state and city within state and indicates the frequency and call sign.

Part IV - COMMUNITY LISTINGS

Presents the Community Listings by state and community and indicates the service, license name, channel, coast station frequency, ship frequency, and explanatory comments.

As with any publication, there are bound to be errors and omissions. Your comments, corrections, and suggestions are welcomed and will contribute to the revisions for the next edition.

GENERAL INFORMATION

MARINE RADIO

The "Maritime Mobile Radio Service" actually consists of two different systems. The VHF system uses 51 simplex frequencies and semi-duplex channels, in the range of 156.2500 - 157.4250 MHz (plus 161.8000 - 162.0000 MHz for "marine operator" repeater outputs). (Repeaters are used only for the ship-to-shore "marine operator" function; outside of Alaska, the marine equivalent of "community repeaters" for boat-to-boat communications is not permitted in the United States, though repeaters are widely used in the Caribbean and in Europe.) Power is limited to 25 watts for mobile stations and 100 watts for shore stations, and the VHF system is considered short range (typically 20 nautical miles or less for boat-to-boat and up to 40 nautical miles from boats to either the Coast Guard or the marine operator). The MF and HF single sideband system uses hundreds of simplex frequencies and semi-duplex frequency pairs in the 2, 4, 6, 8, 12, 16, 22, and 25 MHz bands. Power is limited to 150 watts for most mobile stations and up to 1500 watts for some shore stations, though on the HF frequencies power is largely irrelevant to range. Depending upon the band selected, the time of day, the time of year, and the time during the 11-year sunspot cycle, communications up to 5,000 nautical miles on the marine SSB system are commonplace.

LISTENING TO HF COMMUNICATIONS: BANDS AND PROPAGATION

In the FM world, life is comparatively simple. The radio waves will travel in a straight line-of-sight path from the transmitter to the receiver. The range of a transmitter is a function of the antenna design and height of both the transmitter and receiver antennas, the transmitter's power, and the receiver's sensitivity. Range does not as a practical matter vary with the time of day, time of year, or atmospheric conditions. Therefore, you listen to the same frequencies all the time.

It doesn't work this way in the MF (300 KHz to 3 MHz) and HF (3 MHz to 30 MHz) bands. There is a "groundwave" path, but it is typically quite limited in range (from 50 to 200 miles). In particular, HF radio achieves its "long haul" capability through the ability to bounce HF signals off various layers of the ionosphere and then back to the surface of the earth. (Sometimes, a signal will make more than one bounce, for really hemispheric range). How this works at any given time depends, in the main, upon the degree and altitude of ionospheric layering. During the daytime, there will be several highly charged ionospheric layers, at different altitudes and which will reflect different frequency bands, while at night these tend to collapse into a single band. Moreover, the level of activity of the bands varies as a function of the 11-year sunspot cycle (the current cycle having peaked in 1989).

This means two things for the listener. First, at any given time of the day, some bands are likely to be active in your listening area and some will be dead. Second, when skip transmissions are in use, there is an area between the transmitter and receiver where the transmission cannot be heard. In general, the lower frequencies are in use in the nighttime (MF and 4 and 6 MHz HF), while the higher frequencies are in use during the daytime (6, 8, 12, and 16 MHz HF). During years of high sunspot activity, frequencies as high as 25 MHz may be used in the daytime, while during low activity years the maximum usable frequency may be 12 or 16 MHz.

The general rule for radiotelephone users has been that if you can hear another station on a given band, that station will be able to hear you on the same band (since the skip paths between the two stations will be reciprocal). This isn't true for monitoring, since one of the two parties may come in loud and clear while the other (often closer) station can't be heard at all.

Don't conclude that there is something wrong with your receiver; this is just a fact of radio life.

LISTENING TO TWO-FREQUENCY SIMPLEX COMMUNICATIONS

In the HF services, a large number of communications are conducted over "two-frequency simplex" channels. This means that the shore stations transmit on one frequency and the ship stations transmit on another frequency. Unlike the case of repeaters, however, the ship-side of the pair is not a repeater input and you cannot necessarily hear the full conversation by listening only to the output. In the HF service, repeaters are not necessary to extend range (since range is not dependent upon transmitter power and antenna height) and will not function (as there is no carrier signal to keep the repeater keyed).

The reasons for splitting the two sides of the transmission are several and complex. In part, it is done this way simply to prevent use of the channels for unauthorized simplex communications between ships. In part, also, it is done this way to permit simultaneous reception and transmission without the need of duplexers (which do not function on SSB the way they would be expected to on widely separated FM frequencies).

In some parts of the world (but typically not in the United States), the audio received by the shore station is backfed into the audio transmitted by the shore station, and in these cases you will hear both sides of the conversation (a high seas telephone call, for instance) over the shore frequency. Where this isn't done, monitoring the full conversation requires that the listener keep shifting back and forth between the two frequencies. This is easier to do if you have a dual VFO and can shift instantly between them with the push of a single button.

MF AND HF SIMPLEX FREQUENCIES

Simplex frequencies, used for ship- to-ship and non-telephone ship-to-shore communications, make interesting listening. The HF simplex channels are shown on the new ITU channel plan (channels X50 and up, where X is the band) in PART II. In general, any open channel may be used for ship-to-ship traffic, while ship-to-shore traffic is supposed to be limited to whatever channel the shore station is licensed for. There are no geographical limitations. The MF simplex frequencies, which are not part of the ITU channel plan are:

FREQUENCY	COMMENT
2.0030	Great Lakes only
2.0650
2.0790
2.0825
2.0930
2.0965	Used for marine on-scene weather reports ("MAREPS") by ships to designated shore stations

FREQUENCY	COMMENT
2.1420	South Pacific coast (day only)
2.1820	Calling and Distress
2.2030	Gulf of Mexico
2.2140
2.6380
2.6700	Working channel for traffic between Coast Guard facilities and private vessels
2.7380	Except Great Lakes

While not strictly considered to be maritime frequencies, the following HF simplex frequencies often carry traffic of maritime interest:

FREQUENCY	COMMENT
3.0230	Search and rescue "on-scene" communications
5.6800	Search and rescue "on-scene" communications

FREQUENCY	COMMENT
8.5640	Search and rescue "on-scene" communications
5.6950	Coast Guard to CG Search and Rescue aircraft (night)
8.9840	Coast Guard to CG Search and Rescue aircraft (day)

HF DISTRESS AND SAFETY FREQUENCIES

HF PUBLIC CORRESPONDENCE: MISSISSIPPI RIVER

The following frequencies are allocated for Public Correspondence simplex operation within the Mississippi River system:

SINGLE SIDE BAND FREQUENCIES
4.0650	4.1160	6.2090	6.5100	8.2010	8.7250	12.3620	16.5430
4.0890	4.4080	6.2120	6.5130	8.2130	8.7370	12.3650	16.5460

THE SSB SYSTEM

On the sideband system, 2.1820 KHz (simplex) and 4.1250 KHz (simplex) function similarly to VHF Channel 16, and 2.6700 KHz (simplex) functions similarly to VHF Channel 22A. (The usable range of 2 MHz is about 50 miles during the daytime and about 200 miles at night.) At this point, the similarity between the systems ends.

Prior to the 1991 ITU frequency changes, the HF simplex channels were commonly referred to by maritime radio operators as "Alpha," "Bravo," etc. This terminology persists, and one is likely to hear the following unofficial channel designations used:

CHANNEL DESIGNATIONS

FREQUENCY	OFFICIAL	UNOFFICIAL
4.1250	450	4-A
4.1460	451	4-B
4.1490	452	4-C
4.4170	453	(new allocation)
6.2150	650	(new allocation)
6.2240	651	6-A
6.2270	652	6-B
6.2300	653	6-C

22.1620	2252	22-B
22.1650	2253	22-C
22.1680	2254	22-D
22.1710	2255	22-E

Cruising sailboats tend to be heard on 6-C, 6-D, 8-B, and 12-B. Ocean- and river-going tugs tend to report to their bases each morning and evening on 4-B, 4-C, and 6-B. Radio operators on cruise ships can sometimes be heard chatting on 650 and 6-A. Since the participants in these communications invariably give their positions, they are useful means of determining how open the bands are and how well a receiver/antenna combination is working, at any given time.

While certain of the new ITU simplex channels are designated "distress," the authors have been informed that the Coast Guard does not intend to monitor them. Rather, vessels needing medium- to long-range communications with the Coast Guard will continue to call on the SCN.

The balance of the SSB bands are allocated into two-frequency semi-duplex channel pairs for ship-to-shore traffic: the vessel transmits on one frequency and the shore station transmits on the other. Most of these frequency pairs are used for radio-telephone interconnects, and the four "High Seas Operator" stations in the United States are WOM (Fort Lauderdale, Florida), WOO (Manahawkin, New Jersey), KMI (Point Reyes, California), and WLO (Mobile, Alabama). Five of these pairs, however, are reserved (in the United States, that is, you will hear regular telephone traffic from Europe and South America over them too) for long distance communications between vessels (Coast Guard and private) and Coast Guard and Navy facilities. The Coast Guard stations that monitor these frequencies are few (because communications range is so great); on the east coast you will hear Communications Station ("CommSta") Boston, CommSta Portsmouth (Virginia) and CommSta Miami (Florida) for the Coast Guard, and CommSta Norfolk (for the Navy). You may also hear "RCC," which stands for the United States Rescue Coordination Center, located at Scott Air Force Base in Illinois.

The final entry on the SSB system is the Coast Guard series of simplex frequencies, used for ship-to-shore and more often for aircraft-to-shore SAR operations offshore. The frequencies are 3023 KHz, 4125 KHz, 5680 KHz, 5692 KHz, 5696 KHz, 8984 KHz, 12290 KHz, and 16420 KHz, of which 5696 KHz and 8984 KHz are the most active. (Other Coast Guard ship-to-shore frequencies are included in the System Coordination Network.)

If you put 2182, 2670, 5696, 6501, and 8764 in your HF radio, you will hear 90% of the relevant traffic (or indications of a frequency to change to). (Unless you have a "voice squelch," you'll also hear a lot of static, which is why so few people regularly monitor the HF frequencies. While you're at it, put in 5611 KHz as well, which is the FEMA alert frequency for a serious disaster anywhere in the country.)

THE HIGH SEAS RADIO-TELEPHONE SERVICES IN THE UNITED STATES

There are four U.S. stations providing long distance radiotelephone service to ships at sea. Stations WOM (Fort Lauderdale, Florida), WOO (Manahawkin, New Jersey), and KMI (Point Reyes, California) are operated by AT&T. Station WLO (Mobile, Alabama) is privately owned. These stations carry telephone traffic for recreational vessels more than about 50 miles offshore, commercial fishing vessels, cruise boats, and some aircraft. Because the U.S. radiotelephone stations do not re-broadcast the ship's audio over the shore station's frequency, it is necessary to flip back and forth between the two frequencies in order to hear both sides of the conversation. The ITU frequency pairs used by these stations are as follows:

UNITED STATES COAST GUARD

I. ORGANIZATION

The United States Coast Guard is organized into "districts," "groups," and "stations."

The groups handle administration, support for the ocean-going cutters, pollution-related operations, and major law enforcement within their AORs. The Groups also have remotely-operated VHF "high site" transmitters (For instance, a Boston high rise and Gloucester tower for Group Boston; the Pilgrim Monument in Provincetown, Nobska Point Lighthouse in Woods Hole and the Newport Bridge structure for Group Woods Hole) to augment VHF communications capacity. The Stations have the primary responsibility for near-shore SAR (search and rescue) operations.

II. SURFACE VESSELS

Coast Guard surface vessels are classified into "cutters" and "motorized utility boats." The cutters are generally engaged in high seas patrol, law enforcement, maintenance of aids to navigation, and SAR missions, usually communicate with Coast Guard shore facilities over HF radio, RTTY, and radiofax, and will usually be heard on marine VHF only when making arrangements to dock at one of the Stations (or, more likely, one of the Support Centers).

The motorized utility boats are used for general purpose near-shore SAR and patrol. They do not have names, but are identified by 5- or 6-digit numbers. The first two numbers represent the length of the boat and most of the MUTB's fall into one of three categories: (1) the 41-foot, steel hulled, twin diesel patrol boats (with a nominal crew of 4-5), (2) the 22-foot, twin-outboard Fiberglas "Boston Whalers," and (3) the 17-foot, single- or twin-outboard RHIB's (rigid-hull inflatables). Unlike the cutters, the MUTBs are assigned to specific Stations, and they conduct all of their marine-band communications on VHF.

III. AIRCRAFT

Coast Guard aircraft in this area are of two basic types. The HU-25A, technically called the Guardian but more commonly referred to as a Falcon, is a converted commercial Falcon 20G, with twin jet engines, a top speed of 460 knots, and a range of 2,250 nautical miles. The Falcon is capable of dropping engine-driven pumps and other survival gear to vessels in distress on the high seas, and then remaining on station until a helicopter or other vessel can arrive on the scene.

The HH-3F, sometimes known as Pelicans, are modified versions of Sikorsky CH/RH-53 helicopters, with twin jet engines for propulsion (plus another small jet for auxiliary power supply), a top speed of 100 knots, and a range of 400 nautical miles.

All Coast Guard aircraft identify with the word "Rescue" and a 4-digit number.

Except for approach control within sight of the Air Station (handled on military UHF-AM frequencies) and on-scene coordination with surface vessels (handled on marine VHF-6, -9, -12, and -16), all radio communications with aircraft are conducted on HF via CommSta. Primary frequencies are 5696 KHz (night-time) and 8984 KHz (daytime).

IV. LINGO

Like most military organizations, Coast Guard radio messages are laden with acronyms and jargon. Here are some of the more common:

ACRONYM	MEANING
AirSta	Air Station
ATON	“Aid to navigation” (buoys, lights, etc.)
CommSta	Communications Station
DIW	"Dead in the Water” (refers to vessel not under way, not to a person not breathing)
EPIRB	“Emergency Position Indicating Radio Beacon” (similar to an ELT in an aircraft)
Loran Lines	Refers to parabolic lines printed on a chart representing Loran-C time differences. The intersection of any two “lines” gives a position. For instance, in the Boston area, there are the “14” lines, the “44” lines, and the “25” lines. Also referred to as “TD’s.”
Mayday	Indicates broadcast to follow regarding immediate threat to life or destruction of vessel (from French “M’aidez” which means “help me”)
OD	“Officer of the Day” (person in charge of a Station)
PIW	“Person(s) in the water”
POB	"Person(s) on board”
Pan-Pan	Indicates urgent broadcast to follow relating to safety of persons and vessels (pronounced “pahn-pahn”) (lower than “Mayday”)
SCN	“Systems Coordination Network” (a series of semi-duplex frequency pairs)
Securite	Indicates broadcast to follow relating to marine navigation hazard (pronounced “say-cure-it-tay”)
SitRep	“Situation Report”

COAST GUARD HF FACILITIES

Because of the long range capability of HF communications, the Coast Guard facilities on which HF communications may be made are quite few. They are as follows:

FACILITY	LOCATION
CommSta Boston	Boston, Massachusetts
CommSta Portsmouth	Portsmouth, Virginia
CommSta Miami	Miami, Florida
CommSta New Orleans	New Orleans, Louisiana
Camspac (San Francisco)	San Francisco, California

The most likely place to hear these facilities are 6 and 8 MHz SCN and the 5696.0 KHz and 8984.0 KHz aeronautical frequencies.

Generally, the local Coast Guard "groups" have MF capability on 2182.0 and 2670 KHz. The Coast Guard "stations" generally do not have MF or HF capability and conduct all of their comms on VHF.

COAST GUARD "SYSTEM COORDINATION NETWORK" (SCN)

The United States Coast Guard's use of MF and HF communications falls into three categories.

A. Law enforcement communications are conducted on law enforcement or military channels.

B. Communication with Coast Guard aircraft are generally conducted on aeronautical frequencies, of which the primary frequencies are 5696.0 KHz (nighttime) and 8984.0 KHz (daytime). (See OFFICIAL AERONAUTICAL Frequency Directory.)

C. Long distance voice communications between United States Coast Guard vessels and shore facilities are usually carried over the "System Coordination Network" or "SCN." The SCN consists of a number of frequency pairs in the HF bands, which are in fact ITU radiotelephone channels not assigned to any radiotelephone system in the United States. The SCN frequencies are as follows:

CHANNEL	COAST	SHIP
4 MHz Primary
424	4.4260	4.1340
6 MHz Primary
601	6.5010	6.2000
8 MHz Primary
816	8.7640	8.2400
12 MHz Primary
1205	13.0890	12.2420
16 MHz Primary
1625	17.3140	16.4320

In addition to Coast Guard operational traffic, scheduled broadcasts of weather information are made by certain Coast Guard facilities over the primary SCN frequencies. For instance, NMN (Communications Station Portsmouth, Virginia) gives weather broadcasts on the following schedule:

TIME (UTC)	ITU CHANNEL(S)
0400	424, 601, 816
0530	424, 601, 816
1000	424, 601, 816
1130	601, 816, 1205
1600	601, 816, 1205
2200	816, 1205, 1625
2330	816, 1205, 1625

The SCN primary frequencies are also the channels on which ships in need of Coast Guard assistance will make their initial communications. These channels are monitored on a 24-hour basis by the following Coast Guard facilities:

FACILITY	LOCATION
CommSta Boston	Boston, Massachusetts
CommSta Portsmouth	Portsmouth, Virginia
CommSta Miami	Miami, Florida
CommSta New Orleans	New Orleans, Louisiana
Camspac (San Francisco)	San Francisco, California

THE VHF SYSTEM

The VHF system is highly regulated by type of traffic (distress, calling, ship-to-shore, ship-to-ship, and vessel-to-Coast Guard traffic) and class of user (commercial, non-commercial, and government).

I. HAILING AND DISTRESS

Marine Channel 16 (156.800 MHz) is the designated hailing and distress frequency. It is the channel on which a vessel in distress would call for assistance. If the distress is serious, the vessel will also be "worked" on 16; otherwise the traffic will be shifted to one of the "Coast Guard working" frequencies after the initial hail on 16. In addition, announcements of general broadcast items by the Coast Guard is made on 16; if the message is particularly urgent (indicated by the "Pan - Pan" signal), the message will be broadcast on 16 as well, otherwise listeners will be instructed to shift to another frequency (usually Channel 22A, 157.100 MHz) for the rest of the message. This same system is used for the twice-daily "Broadcast Notice to Mariners."

In theory, vessels wishing to establish contact with another vessel or a shore station for non-distress traffic are required to first call on Channel 16, and then shift to a working frequency appropriate to the type of traffic and class of user. This requirement arises out of the philosophy, which dates all the way back to the sinking of the TITANIC, that by requiring all users to maintain a listening watch on a common channel, distress calls too distant for the Coast Guard to hear would be picked up and relayed by other vessels. The theory worked well for about 50 years (when the common frequencies were 500 KHz CW and 2182 KHz AM voice); today, however, the multitude of recreational boaters who are not very radio savvy or concerned about proper radio use has made monitoring Channel 16 during the summer months a heroic exercise in patience. Nonetheless, if something big breaks, you will probably hear about it first on Channel 16.

II. COAST GUARD WORKING FREQUENCIES

The following channels are the Coast Guard working frequencies, although the usage of them is different (and, in some respects, differs from locale to locale).

CHANNEL	FREQUENCY
06	156.3000
12	156.6000
21A	157.0500
22A	157.1000
23A	157.1500
81A	157.0750
82A	157.1250
83A	157.1750

In general, a civilian vessel requiring communications with the Coast Guard will hail on Channel 16 and then be shifted to a working frequency selected by the Coast Guard station. Channel 22A is the preferred channel for this use, followed by Channels 12 and 06. In addition, Channel 09 (156.450 MHz) is sometimes used. In theory, there is no reason to monitor any of these frequencies, as no communications are initiated on them. However, if the Channel 16 chatter becomes too bad in the summer, replacing Channel 16 with Channel 22A means avoiding the chatter and still having a good chance of picking up something "hot."

Channels 81A and 21A (depending on location) are used for communications directly between Coast Guard stations and Coast Guard vessels. Likewise, Channel 83A is reserved for communications between Coast Guard Stations and CG Auxiliary vessels. These channels are an exception to the "hail first on 16" rule, and one of either 81A or 21A is worth monitoring. Note, however, that in a situation involving both station-to-CG vessel and station-to-civilian traffic, the CG vessel will usually work the same channel as the civilian traffic.

Channel 06 was intended to be used for "on scene" SAR traffic. It is so used in off-shore SAR activities too distant to be monitored from shore stations. It is more commonly used as an overflow channel for CG-to-civilian traffic when 22A and 12 are busy.

Note that all Coast Guard vessels use 5- or 6-digit identifiers. The first two or three digits indicate the vessel's length and type, while the rest of the digits are serial. Thus, "Coast Guard 41418" is a 41-foot twin diesel "motorized utility boat," and "Coast Guard 220501" is a 22-foot rigid-hull inflatable powered by a single 200 hp outboard.

III. COMMERCIAL AND NON-COMMERCIAL WORKING CHANNELS

The following channels are the designated channels for commercial vessels. Again, in theory communications are first established on Channel 16. Note that Channel 09 is the only channel common to both commercial and non-commercial vessels.

Channel 70 (156.5250 MHz) was previously assigned to non-commercial users, but was recently reallocated to the new "digital selective calling" system. This system permits the establishment of contact between two stations based on digital data, after which they shift to another working channel for their voice traffic. Radios capable of monitoring 70 for DSC are required to simultaneously monitor 16 for voice, for the reasons set forth above.

IV. OTHER CHANNELS

The marine operator channels are 24-28 and 84-87. These are repeaterized, and the output frequencies are 161.800 MHz and every 50 KHz, and 161.825 MHz and every 50 KHz, respectively. In Boston, the marine operator uses Channels 26 and 27, while the New Bedford marine operator uses channels 24, 26, and 87. There is some reason for believing that the Electronic Communications Privacy Act outlaws eavesdropping on these frequencies, even though the FCC regulations require a boater intending to make a telephone call to monitor them.

Channels 12 and 14 are usually indicated "port operations" in frequency lists. The usage made of these frequencies is locale-dependent. As noted above, Channel 12 is most often used as an overflow channel for Channel 22A-type traffic.

Channel 13 is dedicated for "bridge-to-bridge" traffic between vessels in motion, where "bridge" here means the steering station of a boat, not something that goes over the river. Power is limited to one watt, and the rules on station identification are waived. In practice, Channel 13 is used for boat-to-boat passing and collision avoidance traffic, often in the blind (preceded by the "securite" message) and usually in conditions of poor visibility. If two boats are about to collide, last-second frantic screams would probably be heard over Channel 13, but that is no reason to monitor the channel on a full-time basis.

MARINE - ON-BOARD COMMUNICATIONS

The following frequencies are authorized for use aboard vessels where authorized by a station license. They are available for use on a shared and cooperative basis with stations operating in the Business Radio Service:

These frequencies may be used for operational communications, and in oil pollution preventions, docking, or life boat and emergency drills. Usage is limited to portables and low power repeaters mounted no higher than ten (10) feet above the boat deck, so range is, by design, very limited.

MARINE TO AIRCRAFT FREQUENCIES

The following frequencies are authorized for use by aircraft. Communications shall be brief and limited to operations in which stations of the Maritime Mobile Service are primarily involved and where direct communications between aircraft and the ship or coast station is involved. The altitude of the aircraft station shall not exceed 1,000 feet and power is generally limited to five watts.,

It should be noted that these Maritime listings are not compiled for in-flight communications, safety, or navigational purposes, but intended as a guide for scanner listeners.

AUTOMATED MARITIME TELECOMMUNICATIONS SYSTEM

The Federal Communications Commission has approved a new AMTS system for use on a nationwide basis. The system is presently in use on the Mississippi River and may be used in the New England area in the future to augment the present VHF Highband Mobile Phone System. Channels 141 to 180 have been approved for use on a nationwide basis with channels 101 to 140 approved for limited usage.

NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE STATIONS

NATIONAL OCEANIC AND ATMOSPHERIC ADMINISTRATION

NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) of the U.S. Department of Commerce provides continuous broadcasts of the latest weather information directly from National Weather Service offices. Taped messages are repeated every 4 to 6 minutes and are routinely revised every 1 to 3 hours or more frequently if needed. Most stations operate 24 hours a day.

During severe weather, national weather forecasts can interrupt the routine weather broadcasts and substitute warning messages.

The following is a list of National Weather Service channels.

PART IV

COMMUNITY LISTINGS

GENERAL NOTES ON LICENSE FREQUENCY LISTINGS

The frequencies in this section are listed by state, followed by the city, service, license, call sign, channel number, coast frequency, ship frequency, and comments.

It should be noted that whenever possible the new ITU frequency is shown along with the channel.

In the VHF frequencies, Channel 16 is not shown as all stations are licensed on this frequency. You should monitor this channel for Distress and Safety Transmissions.

Unlike the case with the public service and "land mobile" bands, where the frequency specified in a given operator's license is the frequency (and the only frequency) on which that operator will be heard, maritime stations tend in practice to utilize larger portions of the marine bands. Interpretation of maritime radio licenses has to take the following observations into account:

1. The marine radio bands consist of three systems. One system is the medium frequency ("MF") and high frequency ("HF") simplex channels in the 2, 4, 6, 8, 12, 16, and 22 MHz bands. These are used for ship-to-ship communications and for communications between ships and "limited coast" stations, usually either a provider of services (i.e., yacht club, commercial salvage) or the "home base" of a commercial maritime operation.

The second system is a series of MF and HF frequency pairs (in the same bands), sometimes known as ITU channels, which are used primarily (but not exclusively) for communications between ships and providers of land-line telephone services. Because the transmit and receive frequencies are different for ships and land stations, these frequencies cannot be used for ship-to-ship communications or communications involving three or more parties.

The third system is the very high frequency ("VHF") system, consisting of many simplex and duplex channels in the 156-157 and 161-162 MHz band.

2. Ships are licensed as "maritime mobile stations," while private shore facilities are licensed as "limited coast stations." In general, a maritime mobile station license authorizes the ship to transmit on any frequency appropriate for the type of traffic involved. A limited coast station license generally limits the licensees to a series of specific channels or frequencies.

In the listings that follow, all maritime mobile licenses have been eliminated, as they reveal nothing about the frequencies on which a particular licensee is likely to be operating on.

3. Limited coast licenses always include authorization for Channel 16 (156.8000 MHz) in the VHF system and, if MF and HF authority is granted, on 2.1820 KHz and (usually) 4.1250 KHz. These are "distress and calling" channels, which all licensees are required to monitor when not actually communicating on another channel.

4. In practice, limited coast stations do not necessarily confine themselves to the frequencies on their license. In the VHF system, for instance, a particular fuel dock or yacht club may be licensed only for Channel 16 and one other working frequency, but in practice it will shift to any working frequency requested by a vessel calling in. In the MF and HF bands, those limited coast stations whose traffic is limited to their own vessels tend to adhere to the specific frequencies on their license, while those facilities who communicate with "the public" will usually, if requested, shift to any simplex channel requested by the calling ship.

The following Service Designators are used in the Community Listings section:

Limited Coast Station:

- Stations licensed to communicate in the Marine Service.
- Stations not providing services to the general public as a common carrier.
- Stations serving the operational, maritime control, and business needs of ships.

Marine Auxiliary:

- Stations on land used in support of the Maritime Service to train personnel.
- Stations used to demonstrate, test, and maintain equipment.

Marine Radiobeacon Station:

- Stations licensed to determine the position, velocity, and/or other characteristics by the use of the propagation of radio waves.

Operational Fixed Station:

- Stations that provide control, repeater, or relay functions for a licensed coast station.

Public Coast Station:

- Stations that provide ship-to-shore radiotelephone and radio telegraph common carrier services to ship radio stations.

Receiver Test Station:

- Stations licensed to conduct receiver tests on ship station frequencies of the channel assigned to the associated Public Coast Station.

Utility Coast Station:

- Stations licensed to one or more hand held radiotelephone units licensed under a single authorization.
- When on ship, ship board rules apply and when on land, private coast station rules apply.

DEFINITIONS FOR "COMMENTS" USED IN THE COMMUNITY LISTINGS SECTION

AMTS:

* Frequencies used for the new Automated Maritime Telecommunications system.

Auth Marine VHF Channels:

* Stations licensed to operate on all marine VHF channels.

* Appropriate for the class of traffic and the class of user involved.

Coast Guard Working:

* VHF channels used by the United States Coast Guard.

Commercial:

* Stations licensed for business and commercial purposes.

Commercial and Recreational:

* Frequencies used for both commercial and recreational purposes.

Distress and Safety:

* Distress - Frequencies used to transmit when threatened by grave and imminent danger and requests immediate assistance.

* Safety - Frequencies used to indicate a message related to safety of navigation.

Facsimile:

* Frequencies used for the transmission and receipt of fixed images.

High Seas Operator:

* Frequencies used by ships on the high seas to place telephone calls.

Marine Operator:

* VHF frequencies used by the Marine Operator for public correspondence.

NBDP and Data:

* Frequencies authorized to transmit Narrow Band Direct Printing and Data.

Public Correspondence:

* Frequencies used by a public coast station serving as a common carrier for the public.

Recreational:

* Frequencies used by pleasure craft.
